"Poor's Manual makes some bad errors in attempting to give the gauge of the var-in attempting to give the gauge of the varin attempting to give the gauge of the various railroads," said Col. H. C. Moore this morning, "but it may be because the returns sent by the railroad officials were incorrect. Half of the superintendent don't know the guage of their lines, and a good many of them run their railroads, anyhow, like the Kentuckian kept tavern. The manual makes the gauge of the Chicago & Eastern Illinois, the Missouri Pacific, St. Louis & San Francisco, I., D. & S., etc. four feet eight and one-half inches. They are each of them four feet mine inches. The "wheel gauge is one thing—the road gauge another. For instance for a 4 ft. 9 in. gauge the wheels are made 4-8½ which will allow the same wheel to run over a 4—9 or a 4—8½ gauge. By the way gauges, like other things, have a history. In early railroading times all the gauges were 4—10. When the first Ohio road was built, President Lane went over to Jersey to get an engine. Being very poor, a second hand contents. built, President Lane went over to Jersey to get an engine. Being very poor, a second hand concern was purchased, built for a 4—10 gauge. The cempany then built their road to match the engine and when the Little Miami Cincinnati connection was built a 4—10 gauge was also used, and later that was made by legislative act the Ohio standard. The first Indiana road (Madison) was made 4—3½ and that became the Indiana and Illinois standard. In Missouri the gauge was fixed by the legislature at 5–6. All southern roads have a five foot gauge. This was the state of affairs when the "compromise" cars were made, Before their day the same car could scarcely cross gauge. This was the state of affairs when the "compromise" cars were made. Before their day the same car could scarcely cross a state border, owing to the divergence in the gauge. These cars were built with a wheel having a four and a half inch tread—wide enough for use on most any gauge. Eventually the Pennsylvania company made uniform the gauge of all its lines, adopting 4-9 as a standard. All lines controlled by this company have this gauge now, and the majority of new roads are adopting the same standard. The Eric, Atlantic & Great Western and O. & M. were built with a six-foot gauge, making a through line from New York to the Mississippi of that width. But the growing tendency is to the Pennsylvania standard, although there is virtually no difference between a 4-9 and a 4-8½ gauge, the same cars running over each readily."

NEWS BY TELEGRAPH

GOULD-CONKLING CORNELL Additional Gosup Concerding the New York Fight-How Conkling's Month was Closed.

[Washington special Cincinnati Gazette,] There is an interesting chapter known here in regard to the relations recently shown to exist between Mr. Conkling and Jay Gould. After Mr. Conkling had failed of re-election his friends set themselves, earnestly at work to paravel the political intrigues by which Mr. Robertson had been made collector, and by which son had been made collector, and by which Mr. Platt and himself were defeated for study of this subject carried them back into the presidential campaign, in fact, as for back as the winter before the Chicago convention met. It was not long before Mr. Conkling was in possession of the very important part which Jay Gould played through agents at Albany in the election of Senator Platt. The amount of money which was used on this occasion became known to Mr. Conkling. According to his information this work was a first step in securing the confirmation of Mr. Robertson when he should be afterward nominated as collector. The facts connected with the pledge taken from Mr. Platt also became known to him. And thus, step by step, he became possessed thus, step by step, he became possessed with a history in great detail of the Albany, New York, and Washington intrigue covering the various branches of the Robertson affair.

Mr. Conkling's friends here, as well as Mr. Condings friends nere, as well as those of Collector Robinson, were for some weeks in daily expectation of the publication of the whole story, as Mr. Conkling had learned it. At a later date his friends ascertained that he had been retained in very important cases which Mr. Gould controlled, and that he did not feel at liberty to make applie what he know about the to make public what he knew about the Robertson intrigue while his legal employ-ment in Mr. Gould's cases continued.

MR. GOULD FEELS AGGRIEVED.

[Interview in New York Herald.] "So, then, Mr. Gould, you consider that you have been pretty badly abused?"
"I do most emphatically. The story which the Times prints to-day after a week's incubation is weak and impotent. The Jackson club horror brought its disintegration and demoralization—then came the Hunter row, and now the "white shirts" of the party have stepped upon Sim Coy and the "workers," leaving the South side utterly without recognition. This is the main grievance, and the growlers find comfort in quoting "Whom the gods would destroy they first make mad." There was trouble and disatisfaction enough before, without this additional breach-opener. Sim Coy accepts the situation well enough, for the Liquor Dealers' association wants him to organize the state, but his friends, who know how hard he worked to elect Gimber, and who felt that the chairmanship of the county committee was insufficient to requite him for his "distinguished services," assert that he was unjustly stepped upon in the interests of a party ornament. They charge his defeat to Gimber; and then again to Lemon, and will not be comforted. The fine, large, round hand of Wm. H. Wilson, Henkle and Bob Ingersoll are yet to speak for the defense, and Attorney-General Brewster on behalf of the government. The decided opinion here is that all of the defendants except Brady and Rerdell will be acquitted, and as to the laster the jury will hang fire and disagree. In such event it is not believed the cases will ever again be pressed by the government. The trial has already cost the United States over $100,000, and the defendants even a larger sum. ACCORDING to General Wolselev one Englishman is a match for five Egyptians. We have a faint recollection of having heard something like this before, but events proved it not altogether true, and from Wolseley's own accounts the Egyptians are doing some very fair fighting.

THE sultan has at last agreed to issue a proclamation against Arabi, but what its character will be is not known yet. If he declares him a rebel, it will be likely to arouse the wrath of the fanatical Mohammedans who think that he is right simply because he is fighting "the Christian dogs," and their antagonism is not a thing to be despised. Should the ulemas of Constantinople take away from the sultan the Caliphate or headship of the church, as they have the power to do, his dynasty would speedily tumble. The porte has been in hard straits between the English and his own people, and is not likely to make anything but a modified proclamation against Arabi.

THE Journal returns to its mutten on the submission question, and chews it over again in the same old way. Evidently there is an impassable gulf between us on that topic. We agree, however, that the organic law is not in the power of the legislature. Mr. Owen meant that the legislature could not make an addition or change in the organic law, as it could in the statutory, without the consent of the people. But the agreement to the change by the legislature is as much a part of the method as the consent of the people. The legislature agrees to the amendments. It does not agree to their submission. The law fixes that. Whether a candidate can be elected who will represent the wishes of the majority on four distinct propositions, has nothing to do with the law. That may not cover such an emergency, and the voter may be left in doubt or go unrepresented partly, or sink his preferences for one thing in order to express them on what he deems a more important measure, but these things do not alter the law. The Illinois rule which requires that only one amendment shall be submitted at a time, avoids any complication of issues and offers a straight question each time. Nor do we for a moment deny that a constituency has a right to instruct its representative, as the Journal intimates, and, therefore, believe that the republican platform in effect instructs its candidates to vote for prohibition, a fact frankly admitted by the Peru Republican, which in speaking of our opinion on the submission question

In a very able argument, printed on the day of the republican convention, it said:
"The legislature is compelled to have something to do with this amendment; and that something is to agree to it or reject that something is to agree to it or reject it." Of course the legislature has much to do with amendments proposed. The republican state convention demanded that the next legislature should do with the pending amendments precisely what The News says is necessary—agree to them.

THE Sentinel shricks at the idea that the nomination of Luther Benson is a disgrace to the democratic party, and runs its cus tomary gamut to the effect that The News has no soul, no sympathy, no gush, "no bigod nonsense" generally, as the young man in Little Dorritt remarks. It says: "To-day Mr. Benson in lofty integrity, in noble ambitions, in intellectual grasp, and all the many virtues that adorn citizenship, is General Tom Browne's equal." Is this true? While we have sufficient charity for Mr. Benson as a fallen creature, and would not lay a straw in his way in any effort he might make to raise himself. we confess to no patience with the maudlin sentimentality that would exalt him to prominence and a place of great responsibility, when he has no shadow of fitness. Mr. Benson, according to his own statement, was a drunkard from his fourteenth year. He says he spent "fi'teen years in hell," meaning that his life during that period was one long debauch. Allowing a great deal for the natural extravagance of the man's statements, we are still justified in judging from his own confession that he squandered away his youth, when he should have been accumulating knowledge and gaining character. In 1874 he reformed and appeared as an advocate of temperance, posing as "an awful example," and we have no doubt making him self out to have been much worse than he really was. Since then his life has been that of a temperance lecturer, following the business as an avocation, to make money by. His speeches, judging by one or two the writer has heard, are simply rant and fustian. They show neither ability, investigation nor knowledge. He has not been consistent in his reform. His frequent lapses into drunkenness, and his arrests in this city and elsewhere amid vile associates, have done much harm to the temperance cause. We regard him as a temperance charlatan, devoid of any ability that would inure to the benefit of any constituency. He has a voice and nothing else, except the talent to make money out of his harrangue. If this is the sort of thing that is needed in a congressman or a councilman, the republic has fallen on evil days. And to compare such a man with such a confessed record of a misspent life, so barren of results, with Gen. Tom Browne, is to rebuke all decency of living and all honest endeavor to rise by industry and merit. There is no possibility of Mr. Benson's party that vaunts itself as the party of pur ity and reform. "INDIANA'S unusual crop of presidential candidates" as the New York San is pleased to term it, calls from that paper an examination and review thereof. Of Mr. Hendricks it says, after reference to his election once as vice-president (sic): "He is a most estimable citizen and likewise very good looking: and, if he should ever be chosen president, we hope he will not be counted out, as he was when his name stood second on the ticket in 1876." Another democratic aspirant it calls Mr.

the disgrace of nominating him from a

Joseph E. McDonald, and says: "He is a stronger man than Mr. Hendricks, though without the suavity of manner and the elegance of deportment which distinguish that gentleman. If Mr. McDonald distinguish that gentleman. could have got nominated in 1880, he would have stood a fair chance of being elected but Hendricks beat him then, and it would perhaps, be a just retribution if in 1884 he should beat Hendricks. Turn about is fair play.

To those who knew Mr. McDonald best, and such may be found in greater number here at his home than elsewhere, the truth of the above portraiture will be recognized, while the dog in-the-manger proceeding at Cincinnati in 1880 is history. Of Mr. English the Sun wonders that it hears noth ing, and asks;

Is it because he was too roughly used two years ago when he ran for vice presi dent, or because he has no appetite for such an animated and expensive contest as would now await him if he were the candidate of his party?

Possibly Mr. English, too, like Mr. Mc Donald, has felt the "whip and scorns" which Indiana's once "favorite son" has visited upon those who might be preferred before him, and thinks the game is not worth the candle. At any rate Mr. English announced his retirement from politics in that speech which the republican state committee has been good enough to pledge itself to circulate. In this reproduction from the Sun, we have let the last come first, for the Sun's editorial begins thus:

First comes Senator Ben Harrison, once a defeated candidate for governor of the state, the grandson of a president, and a very handsome man, though he did not believe in Garfield. The republican state convention has given him what it regards as a lift toward the White House, but we fear it will not amount to much. It appears that as soon as Brother Harrison got to Washington as senator, he set about getting clerkships, and other convenient places for his relatives, and the story is that he has got about thirty of them quartered on the treastry. No man with such a record can now be mominated for president. We fear that Brother Harrison will have to wait awhile, at least until after his relatives have been turned out.

This paragraph recalls to us one of the first, for the Sun's editorial begins thus:

This paragraph recalls to us one of the mest amusing passage of true comedy in all literature, a passage that has humor in it pure and undefiled. Thus:

Prince. What, fought you with them all?

Palsteff. All? I know not what you call all;
but il I lought not with fifty of them. I am a bunch of radish. Il there were not two or three and fifty upon poor old Jack, then I am

Prince. Tray the job past praying for, I have some of them.

Folstaff. Nay, that's past praying for, I have peppered two of them; two, I am sure I have paid, two rogues in buckram suits. I tell thee what, Hal, if I tell thee a lie, spit in my face, call me a horse. Thou knowest my old ward; here I lay, and thus I bore my point. Four rogues in buckram let drive at me—

Prince. What four !Thou said'st but two ever

Prince, Fillands, Bost thou hear me, Hal?
Politoff. Dost thou hear me, Hal?
Prince Ay, and maik thee too, Jack.
Folloff. Doso, for it is worth the listeni fless nime in buckram that I told thee of-Prince: Se, two more already.

Palstaff: Their points being broken, began to give me ground; but I followed me close and came in foot and hand, and with a thought seven of the eleven I paid.

Prince: O montrous! Eleven buckram men rown out of two. That is the analysis of and answer to the Sun's story. General Harrison has procured the appointment of just two of his relatives to the government service, and but one of these-to a clerkship in the postoffice in this city-is such as comes from Senator Harrison's constituency. The other lived in Pennsylvania, and got a low grade clerkship in the pension department, chargeable to Pennsylvania, Senator Harrison's share of it being in his endersement of Pennsylvania's claims. Senstor Harrison's son is in the government service. He was there before his father was, and while the latter was in private life. His employment is in a professional capacity, and in the line of professional work for which he educated himself. Senator Harrison's brother, of Tennessee, is also a government officer, and he got his place as the senator got his, by the support of the republicans of his own state: and we are glad to add that this evidence of his merit did not meet the jealous disapproval of his senatorial brother, but his cordial endorsement. So there are but two of these appointments chargeable to Senator Harrison. and one of these was in the endorsement of Pennsylvania claims and both were to subordinate positions as clerks. The report first had it that Senator Harrison had procured the appointment of eleven of his relatives to office. "O monstrous! Eleven buckram men grown out of two." But the able Falstaff of the Sun has raised the eleven to thirty! At the next round we

The Kansas Refugees Again,

[Leavenworth Times]
It is stated that 60,000 refugees came to this state; anyone who knows anything at all knows that not one-third of that number ever came here. The story that 10,000 are destitute is equally a bare-faced falsehood; in this year of plenty, destitution can only be the result of physical inability to work or downright laziness; and we do not believe there are 10,000 used up colored people in the state, nor that there are that number who will not work if they have a chance. The whole thing is such a deliberate scheme for the robbery of the charitably inclined that we think it is about time for Governor St. John to haul off his indorsement of the same.

Finding a Wreck Fifty Years Old. Finding a Wreck Fifty Years Old.

For some time past Capt. D. Chapin, mine locater, of New Jersey, has been cruising outside of Erie Harbor in the hope of locating the wreck of the schooner Vermillion, which, with 350 tons of copper, was sunk in a storm nearly fifty years ago. Thursday he located the long sought treasure by the aid of a magnetic rod. The indicator was violently disturbed and attested the immediate presence of the metal. The wreck discovered is in fifty feet of water. An ingot weighing fifty pounds has been brought to the surface, and a huge diving bell is to be placed over the spot, and men are engaged to get up the long-concealed treasure, worth over $150,000. IMAGINARY TROUBLES.

Some one has shrewdly observed that, but for the imaginary diseases in regard to which people seek medical advice, many of our doctors would long ago have starved to death. It is not o bad as that, perhaps, but there can be little doubt that the number of imaginary diseases with which people suffer greatly exceeds that o serious maladies, and many of those who consult a physician when they feel a trifle indisposed would be quite as well off if they took no nedicine at all. They suffer the most mysterious aches and pains, and to hear their complaints one might suppose they were afflicted with all the ills that flesh is heir to, whereas, if the truth were told, nothing more serious is the matter than a temporary derangement of the digestive organs, and all that is needed to restore them to health is a simple strengthen tonic, such as Liebig Malt Extract, which invigorates the whole system, buoys up the spirits, stimulates the appetite facilitates the assimila tion of food. At its magic touch, the disease which have been conjured up by the imagina tion take wing, and life assumes once more a bright and cheerful aspect. Mr. Barnes at English's Opera Ronse,
Rev. George O. Barnes conducted three services at English's Opera Ronse, resterday—morning, afternoon and night. In each instance the attendance was very large, particularly at night when several hundred people were unable to gain admission, although every part of the theater was open to the public. At the alternoon service one man was anointed. At night there were ten confessions. Mr. Barnes stated after his sermen at the night service that he did not wish to return to the church, but desired to continue his work at the theater. He

One man wanted to know how much the rent would be. to know how much the rent would be. "My God, man," exclaimed Mr. Barnes, "what difference does that make? Don't you want to help the Lord?" After some hesitation ten men were found to guaractee the rent, whereupon Mr. Barnes announced that the usual afternoon meeting would be held to day at the Meridian Street church and the evening service at the opera-house.

the opera-house. Kansas Prohibition Agaia

To the Editor of The Indianapoils News: "Prohibition," in The News of a few days "Prohibition," in The News of a few days ago, attempts to answer in a flippant manner my communication of the 23rd. It is after the pattern of most others who oppose anti-prohibition views, and who, when they attempt to discuss the subject never go deep enough. I have said why I was opposed to prohibition, and do not consider because I oppose it, that I have joined forces with the liquor interests. I consider it more as a high moral principle than a case. more as a high moral principle than a question of temperance. Prohibition does not make temperance and I believe never will. That is why I am opposed to it, and in support i the assertion is instanced the fact that I fived in Kansas and saw its workings from the

in Kanssa and saw its workings from the lst of May, 1881, to a few weeks since. I believe, in a manner, that "it is petter to bear the ills we have than to flee to those we know not of." Where there is a demend there will always be a supply. This demand makes evasions of the law a natural consequence. No justification of the liquor interests is sttempted. No case is known wherein "the liquor traffic has engendered respect for the law," but we have, under prohibition, not only the vice and iniquity of drinking places, but the many studied ways to present the law from vent the law from effecting the detection of the drinker as a witness. Perjury is often resorted to. Is that not a disrespect of law? Evasions of all kinds are attempted. Is there any moral education about that? And still the whisky is drank the same as usual. This is not a mere assertion, I know it to be a fact. Municipal corporations lose the tax they would otherwise gain. Men who have drank it in moderation all their lives will drink just the same under prohibition. The old toper will do just as he has done before. The law, instead of having a wholesome effect, has the opposite. The law can not, is not and never will be enforced the same as other criminal laws because it can not be wised as a consistent of the same as other criminal laws because it can not be wised as a consistent of the same as other criminal laws because it can not be wised as a consistent of the same as other criminal laws because it can not be wade a consistent of the same as other criminal laws because it can not be wade a consistent of the same as other criminal laws because it can not be wade a consistent of the same as other criminal laws because it can not be same as other criminal laws because it can not be same as other criminal laws because it can not be same as other criminal laws because it is not an action of the same as other criminal laws because it is not an action of the same as other criminal laws because it is not an action of the same as other criminal laws because it is not an action of the same as other criminal laws because it is not an action of the same as other criminal laws because it is not an action of the same as other criminal laws because it is not an action of the same as other criminal laws because it is not action of the same as other criminal laws because it is not action of the same as other criminal laws because it is not action of the same as other criminal laws because it is not action of the same as other criminal laws because it is not action of the same as other criminal laws because it is not action of the same as other criminal laws because it is not action of the same as other criminal laws because it is not action of the same action of th laws.

As to the nomination of St. John speaking very positively in favor of prohibition at a bitter party fight, is a creature of the gentleman's imagination. It is admitted that he was nominated by a large majority in the convention but what does that signify? I have not the least doubt but that half the convention adjourned to the numerous saloons in Topeka after the nominatior, as they did after the state congressional con-vention, and took a drink. Now what does venion, and took a drink. Now what cost that signify? He is not the choice of the party, and was selected from the fact that his extreme and fanatical views on temperance would precipitate the issue to prohibition vs. anti-prohibition, and would more clearly indicate the feeling of the people of Kansas on that question at the November election

It is not for people who have never seen anything of prohibition to talk about what prohibition will do. Let those who have witnessed it from an unbiassed standpoint judge its effects and defects, that the public who contemplate changing the organic law of a state so generally and induscriminately markets. ber election. changing the organic law of a state so gen-erally and indiscriminately may know what to expect. To make law is one thing; to enforce it is quite another. Where one law is disrespected it leads to the disre-spect of other laws. Nature's laws are higher than man's laws, and when it comes to that point where man attempts to change nature's freak it is time for a deep study. nature's freaks it is time for a deep study of these questions. Those loudest in their fenatical and illiberal distribes against intemperance, are the last to assist fallen humanity. Prohibition is too vast a change to be grasped at once. The education of future generations may have the desired effect, but compulsory means to effect that end are directly in conflict with the sought-for object.

The Texas Terror. Special dispatches from Concho say the situation is heartrending. Thus far forty-nine people are drowned. The names, as far as can be ascertained, are: Mrs. Metcalf and daughter, a negro servant, George Robertson, Mrs. Scott, Dr. Owens and child, one Mexican, twenty Mexicans at Kelly's ranch, ten Mexicans at Taukerly's ranch, wife and four sons of John Mathias, a woman with her baby. Mrs. Metcalf and baby have been recovered. At Benficklin, twenty seven houses were destroyed, and much other damage done. The court house has fifteen feet of water in it. San Angeles lost a number of adobe buildings, nearly 160 altogether, and all the houses were submerged.

MARKET REPORT.

Indianapolis Wholesale Market-Daily Beview. The market opened to day steady even to monotony. Groceries have undergone no changes, although the shades of feeling vary somewhat.

Coffees continue strong: foreign fruits are declining; canned goods are firm and will go higher Tobacco is stiffer, and cigar makers have advanced prices one dollar.

Collections are easier in dry goods, and the general tone of the market continues favorable to an increasing trade. Prices inc ine toward firmness and the majority of the mills are sold up to there full production. Cottons are firmer than woolens, yet no concersions are to be had in any line of desirable goods. A good order busines is still doing and there are no indica tions of a reduction in the values or the demand

Country produce generally is steady. Eggs and butter are held at old figures. Grapes are easier and the supply is increasing. Potatoes are a shade firmer but will remain cheap.

THE METRODISTS.

Asbury's Million Deliar Denntien.

The pulpits of the various churches of the city, yesterday, were filled by clergymen attending the Southeast Indian conference. The services at Central Avenue tabernacle were peculiarly interesting. In the morning the preliminary love-feast was conducted by Hev. Charles Tinsley. Bishop Wiley preached from the text: "For the Jews require a sign and the Greeks seek after wisdom, but we preach Christ crucified." The sermon was one of great power, and the congregation one of great power, and the congregation was much affected. At the close of the sermon Charles E. Line, Thomas W. Northcott, William B. Clancy and Francis A. Guthrie were ordsined deacons by Bishop Wiley, prayer being offered by Bishop Bowman.

In the afternoon a sermon was preached by Rev. Dr. J. M. Reid, general missionary secretary, after which J. T. O'Neal and Al-bert Cain were ordained elders by the bishop. In the evening a sermon on Methodism in South America was preached by Rev.

Thomas B. Wood, Missionary to South America. Among other things he said: "I am ashamed of my Senth America. Among other things he said: "I am ashamed of my country in that it neglects its opportuities in this field. Too many of the ministers it has sent to South America have been unworthy of their opportunities, and some of them drunkards. In these Spanish republics they have copied our constitution, our laws, and our school system, and yet there is anarchy, oppression and regeneration seems far from them. Do we appreciate the fact that the gospel is the cause, the source of all our boasted Angla-Saxon civilization? These people can never find peace and true prosperity until they draw it from the same all-potent source. The Huguenots tried to evangelize parts of the country and failed. Allen Gardner, an English naval captain, made a gallant struggle in Bolivia, and finally, with his companions, died of starvation on a desertialand. It was reserved for our own Methodist Episcopyal church to make the effort that is succeeding." Mr. Wood then outlined the vast possibilities for religious work in South America, and closed by singing "Gates Ajar" in Spanish, the congregation singing the cherus in English. Rev. Dr. Reid suggested that it would be appropriate for Indiana Methodists to raise $20,000 to build a church and missionary headquarters at Montevideo. sionary headquarters at Montevideo.

TO-DAY'S PROCEEDINGS.
At the session of the conference this morning, Dr. W. P. Stowe, of the Cincinnati Book Concern, stated that the three western papers would soon be made up somewhat differently, cut and pasted, by the middle of October, size and price remaining the area

The report of the committee on the observance of the Sabbath was submitted. It was emphatically opposed to gate fees at camp meetings on the Sabbath. The conference adopted the report as expressive of the sense of the conference, although there was some of the conterence, attnough there was some opposition on the part of Rev. Mr. Jenkins, who thought gate fees were necessary to pay camp meeting expenses. Rev. Mr. Tinsley read the stewards report of disbursements to conference claimants and the distribution was made. The amount of conference collections was reamount of conference collections was reported at $1,312.72, the amount of the claims were $4,550.

The committee on missions reported $240 received from the Miller fund.

The presiding elders were appointed a committee to apportion $950 of the episcopal fund.

Rev. Mr.

Tarkington wanted to know what avail this action of the conference on the gate fee question would be.

The bishop stated that by thumping away the walls of Jericho would fall down away inc want altimately.
"But what do you propose thump with?" inquired

Tarkingtor,

They are as effective as a ram's horn at least."

The committee on education was read. It recommended the $100,000 endowment for Asbury University, and suggested that the effort to raise the sum be inaugurated during the semi-centennial next October. It also recommended that this conference assume $25,000 of the subscription, The trustees of Asbury were recommended for re-election. The committee recommended the apportionment of $12,000 for the benefit of Moore's Hill. Dr. H. B. Ridgway was fadded to the Moore's Hill faculty. The conference adopted so much of the report as did not refer to Asbury university.

Dr. W. X. Ninde, president of Garrett Biblical institute, at Evanston, addressed

Biblical institute, at Evanston, addressed the conference, setting forth the condition of Garrett college. He said that the college had got beyond the point of asking contributions that it was salf-supporting city of Garrett college. He said that the college had get beyond the point of asking contributions, that it was self-supporting, citing the fact that, whereas a few years ago the income of the college, $8,000, was absorbed in paying the mortgage interest, now the interest was not half so large, and the income was $24,000 last year, where upon Bishop Wiley remarked that "it was gratifying to know of one Methodist institution that was very nearely out of debt." The report of the committee on temperance, which was printed in The News of Saturday, was then read.

Rev. Mr. Noble moved that that portion of the report endorsing the Indianspolis Journal be struck out, and an endorsement of all papers favoring prohibition be substituted, He said thathe had been unable to tell whether or not the Journal, while it favors submission, was really in favor of prohibition as a principle. Elder Pye favored the original resolution. Mr. Beard earnestly spoke in favor of the Journal, and all the papers."

A motion to strike out the eulogistic references to the war record of the Methodist church prevailed, as it seemed self-glerification.

A motion by Rev. Mr. Wells to strike out the part referring to the voting only for candidates favoring submission, was, on motion of Rev. Dr. Curtiss, laid on the table.

A motion prevailed that the words "at a special election" be inserted in the resolutions.

The report was then adopted as a whole.

Gov. Porter being introduced, said he had simply come as the representative of the state of Indiana to pay respect to a body of men devoted to the promotion of public morality. He took occasion to say, however, that when he saw by the morning papers that the temperance resolutions were public morality. He took occasion to say, however, that when he saw by the morning papers that the temperance resolutions were to be discussed, he knew no good reason why he should stay away. He emphasized the wisdom of the resolution in the dem and for the submission of the amendments. He said the evil of intemperance was daily brought to his knowledge by the application for pardons. He very feelingly expressed his sense of appreciation of such a body of men as sat before him, who were engaged in the work of improving public morality. He closed by quoting from Dr. Chalmers: "Methodism is christianity in earnest."

Rev. Mr. Holliday, on behalf of the trustees of Asbury University, then took the floor, and officially announced that a wealthy Methodist (W. C. DePauw, of New Albany), would denate $1,000,000 to pay current expenses and on other conditions. These latter conditions, such as the purchase of a campus and ground for the law school and dormitories, had already been complied with. Just previous to the semi-centennial, next October, Mr. DePauw would meet other wealthy Methodists in Indianapolis and arrange such details as would enable the church to carry out the conditions. Mr. Holliday then urged the conference to make every effort to raise the $25,000 apportioned to it. The report of the educational committee was then adopted.

Rev. L. G. Adkinson then made a vigorous appeal in behalf of Moore's Hill col-lege, of which he was president. He crit-icized somewhat the reports of the attend-ance at Asbury university, showing that the attendance from the Southeastern Indi-ana conference was very small.

The conference was very small.

ana conference was very small.

The conference resolved to publish a detailed report of the missionary subscription at its next session, the report to show contributions from fifty cents upward.

The report of the committee on church extension was adopted. It simply commended the cause and deplored the scant contributions to the work by large congressions.

The report of the committee on popular amendments was read and adopted. It was emphatically opposed to dancing, theatergoing, card playing, circus-going and horse racing as contrary to spiritual life.

A short report of the committee on women's foreign missions was read, urging more vigorous work.

The report of the committee on entertainment was then read. It recommended that the conference hereafter pay its own way, and that the expenses of such ministers be paid by the conference, all members taking up a collection prior to attending the

It was also recommended that the next conference be held the first week in October, 1883, and that it be held in either Columbus, Greensburg or Shelbyville.

So much of the report as referred to the conference paying its way was emphatically opposed by Rev. Mr. Tinsley, Rev. Mr. Tarkington and Rev. Mr. Roberts, and advocated by Dr. Curtiss. The report was laid on the table by a large majority.

A resolution was adopted fixing the time of holding the next conference not earlier than the middle of September.

sact—that every body is so familiar with in garden patches and weedy commons. The air was full of them yesterday, as the private naturalist of The News was pursuing his investigations of general nature in that direction. They actually looked like a snow fall of large flakes, and their incessant motion, rising into the air, settling on the blossoming weeds, sailing across and around, would have made the illusion perfect if an August sun had not interfered. But the suggestion of snow was positively cooling. As the shadow of a passing cloud swept over the whirling mass, the rapid darkening and lightening of the millions of creamy wings was an effect for a painter to study. There are a great many pretty things to see in the neglected spots of the Almighty's work, if one will only look for them or look at them when they come to him.

the coming speech of Senator Harrison, in effect whether it will take the form of a reply to Senators Voorhees and McDonald, or whether it will be a bold and straightforward enunciation of republican principles founded apon the platform, and sufficiently elaborate to form a broad and comprehensive basis from which to shape the issue of the coming campaign. Among the local politicians there is a disposition to see the democracy placed upon the defensive, and it is argued that if Mr. Harrison proceeds to dissect the speeches to be made to-night and aiready made by the gentlemen named, it virtually credits them with having assumed the offensive. They add that there is time enough for debate after the campaign is fairly opened, and the opportunity is now at hand for Mr. Harrison to demonstrate his ability as a great leader, rather than as a powerful debater. In this respect, unusual interest will attach to his address.

Offer Rejected.

Offer Rejected.

The internal revenue commissioner has rejected the offer of a compromise made by Jacob Boos, the brewer of Huntington, i. e. $3,000 and all the costs in full settlement of all charges of frauds upon the revenue now pending against hlm, conditioned that prosecution cease with such settlement. The commissioner has also instructed District Attorney Holstein to proceed against Boos, the same as if no offer of compromise had been made, and the case will be tried during the November term.

Teachers' Institute.

The Marion County Teachers' institute began its annual session at the high school this morning. Exercises in arithmetic were given by E. E. Smith, of Lafayette; in grammar by J. B. Roberts, of Indioaspolis; in reading by Mrs. R. A. Moffett, of Rushville; in physiology by Dr. A. W. Brayton; in pedagogics by E. E. Smith, and in geography by J. B. Roberts. The institute will continue in session through the week.

Seldem, if ever, does a case of true love en twine about two females, but such is the case here in our city. One young lady on Vine stree has been a companion and intimate friend of Miss R-, on Duval street, of this city, for years, and the other day planned to unite in matrimony. Miss R. being the larger of the two, was to personate the husband, and Miss S. the wife. The way they were to procure license was for Miss R. to don male attire. So they talked the matter over, and Miss R. called at the clothing house of J. A. McKenzie and let him into the secret and was elegantly fitted to a youth's size suit, shirt, seeks and suspenders It was amusing to see her try to put the pant on over her head, but with a little instruction the suit was all O.
